Ronald Ziegler, the White House press secretary, answering reporters' questions, declared that the agreement would not in any way help Egypt get a military

Psychologically, for the Egyptians, the most striking aspect of today's declaration was the announcement that Egypt will get the prospect that Egypt will at last become a major power commensurate with its size and population of 37 million, instead of remaining a country that is mired in poverty and unable to provide essential services to its citizens because of military ex-sounded several times by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat during Mr. Nixon's three-day stop in Cairo but couched it in much stronger language.

"The Arab nation," he said, "has appealed to the conscience of the world for more than a quarter of a century to regain their lost rights and to undo the injustice which was committed, but those appeals were in vain and they had no alternative but to resort to arms in the defense of their rights, their land and their sacred shrines." The king praised the efforts of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to bring peace to the Middle East. "We hope the United States of America will continue its efforts," he said.

The Nixon visit was announced here today at the end of a NATO Council meeting. The summit meeting's purpose is to give the other members of the Alliance an opportunity to discuss the President's scheduled talks the following day with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev and also, the communique says, to "consider other matters of common interest."

It is assumed here that the long-delayed signing of an Atlartic declaration will take place on this occasion. The text of the declaration is still the subject of

Wilson Tries 'Invisible Profile' Method to Win Over Voters

By Alvin Shuster

LONDON, June 14 (NYT),--When Harold Wilson stood outside 10 Downing Street on taking office, he told the television audience in a brief statement that he was going right in to tackle the nation's problems. Sloce theo, the public has seen very little of the prime minister.

What many here are calling an almost "invisible profile" has been a deliberate policy. Apart from some speeches at political meetings, he has made only three brief television appearances, given no news conferences, turned down all requests to meet privately with reporters and permitten only one radio interview.

It is all in sharp contrast to the style he embraced io 1964, when he was first elected. He was everywhere then, playing all the instruments and conducting. The result, according to his friends, was to convince him that the public had become weary of him and the Labor party by 1970, when they voted in the Conservatives led by Edward Heath.

Now, returned to office after nearly four years in opposition, the 58-year-old prime minister is saving himself from too much exposure, adopting a more relaxed approach. He plans to call another general election later this year and feels that the pubhe will be seeing enough of him and other politicians during that

October Election?

He is the consummate politi-cian—he once said that a Labor party politician becomes a statesman only when he dies-and be wants to go to the country, perhaps in October, to bolster bis parliamentary support. The electioo Feb. 28 left his party without a majority in the House of Commons, the first such minority government in 45 years.

"He's decided on a period of unspectacular government," one of his sides said. "He wants to abow, oevertheless, that it's ooe that in time can govern and deliver through an experienced cabinet. He feels the public is simply fed up seeing politicians all over the television screens and be wants to give the people a rest from lecturing and all

Everything Mr. Wilson has done so far has been directed at obtaining that comfortable margin of victory next time. He seems to many to be working as much at creating a climate of competence and success as on specific

It has not been a period of clear sailing, bowever, and there are enough storms ahead to convince Mr. Wilson and party strategists that the sooner they decide on an election the better. Inflation persists, with prices expected to rise by 17 to 20 percent this year. There are threats of drop in living standards and a worsened deficit in payments, now running at about $1 billion

"The more you go down a rocky road, the more likely you are to fall over," one of Mr. Wilson's aldes said. "As a minority government, the longer we go on, the more chance we have of being defeated in the House."

Few doubt that Mr. Wilson has been reading the public mood correctly. All the polls show that his strategy is paying off among the voters, with the Labor party enjoying comfortable leads ranging from 6 to 13 percent over the Tories.

After all the pre-election turmoil, including the coal miners' strike, the three-day work week for most of British industry and the three-week election campaign to cut profit margins and hold with all its stridency, the country has settled down to a period of relative calm.

The strategy from the start was clear: Settle the miners' strike by giving them virtually what they wanted, get industry back to full-time work, proceed with a mixture of "goodies" and stringent measures to ease the nation's economic ills, build up a program that would help insure re-election and keep the divided Labor party together as long as

On the domestic front, he raised pensions, froze reots, announced subsidies on milk, bread and cheese, imposed tighter price controls on many items and moved mortgage rales. But to pay for all this, and more, he increased the price of beer, eigarettes, electricity, coal and postage and pledged his party to a still tindefined program to tax the rich.

Focus no EEC Terms

In foreign affairs, the main focus has been on carrying out the Labor party's pledge to "renegotiate" Britain's terms of entry into the European Economic Community and then to submit the results to the voters in a referendum. Mr. Wilson is described by his colleagues as not feeling passionately one way or the other about remaining in the Common Market, but there are signs that the government has decided basically to remain in, if its minimum demands are met.

Somewhat paradoxically, the Labor party's traditional friends -the trade unions—pose the most serious threat in coming months. So far, there has been a period relative industrial peace, despite unrest among nurses, teachers civil servants and nthers nver pay demands.

Mr. Wilson campaigned against the compulsory wage controls of the Tory party and pledged to remove them. Although they re-main in force, he intends to lift them in the oext few weeks. opening up the possibility of huge wage demands and new inflationary pressures.

What Mr. Wilson is counting on here is a vague "social contract" with the unions, and it may not work. He says the contract is "not a piece of paper" but a "living and developing relationship" whereby the unlons hold back their demands in gratitude for the Labor party's antiinflation package and for repeal of the Industrial Relations Act. a

Whether the unions go along in the coming year remains lhe key to the success of Mr. Wilson's strategy.

King Faisal is not only the monarch of an influential Arab country but he is also a revered figure throughout the Moslem world as the keeper of the holy places of Islam.

These are principally the pilgrimage sites of Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia, where millions of Moslem faithful flock each year. But no less imporlant in King Faisal's eye is the Dome of the Rock in Jerusalem, where Israel rules.

The Dome of the Rock is the place from which Moslems believe that Mohammed rose heaven, and then returned with the divine inspiration for the teachings of the Koran.

The wealth of Saudi Arabiathe nation expects to earn about $25 billion from oil exports this year-is almost entirely the result of oil discoveries and development by the Arabian-American Oil Co., a consortium of four American companies known as Aramco.

The Saudi Arabian government, which has already bought a 25 percent sbare in Aramco for $500 million, is expected to take over full ownership soon, retaining the foreign partners in a close relationship for exploration and marketing.
The Saudi Arabian develop-

Gesell Orders Start To Ehrlichman Trial

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, June 14 (IRT),

Federal Judge Gerhard Gesell
today ordered the trial of former White House aide John Ehrlichman and three co-defendants, charged in the burglary of the office of Daniel Elisberg's psychiatrist, to begin on June 26.

The judge ruled that the White House had now complied with rules governing the produc-tion of evidence needed by the delense and added that further demands for evidence by Mr. Ehrlichman would be considered nn a "document-by-document"

The action culminated a tireeweek legal battle over the surrender of 2 1/2 years of hand-written files subpoenaed by Mr. Ehrlichman. The break in the impasse developed during the last two days when the White House withdraw claims of the control of the surrender withdraw claims. withdrew claims of executive privilege for some of the documents and satisfied Judge Gesell that the former No. 2 White House aide would have access to attorney to be present when the files were examined. Judge Gesell had rejected both contentions, declaring that Mr. Nixon's stance bordered on obstruction. At one point he threatened to dismiss the charges against Mr. Ehrlichman and on Wednesday he ordered the trial of the former presidential aide severed from that of his co-defendants and postponed indefinitely.

Affidavit Presented Later Wednesday, special Watergate prosecutor Leon Ja-worski asked the judge to rescind the order and presented an affi-davit from the White House stating that nothing relevant to Mr. Ehrlichman's defense remained in the files.

Mr. Jaworski also said that the White House would waive claims of privilege on at least some of the material.

Yesterday, Judge Gesell met with attorneys for the White House, the special prosecution and Mr. Ehrlichman and worked out further details of the compromise, including a modifica-tion of what material could be demanded from the White House. During today'e brief session, the President's chief Watergate attorney. James St. Clair, turned over memos from June 19, 1971, and June 22, 1971, documents that Mr. Ehrlich man had claimed were being withheld by the White House and were vital to his defense.

Mr. St. Clair sald that examination of a national security rule demanded by Mr. Ehrlich-man would be completed by Monday. He also filed with the court a list of 49 items Mr. Ehrichman has said he needed from the White House.

Testimony Barred

During the hearing, Mr. St. Clair attempted to put the former White House aide on the witness stand to testify that there were still further documents being withheld. But Judge Gesell would not allow this. Mr. Ehrlichman and five codefendants were indicted on be valid.

WASHINGTON, June 14 (IHT). -The White House has ap-parently decided on a basic line attack to nullify the effect of the Watergate grand jury action naming President Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up. This strategy seems to involve essentially a public relations campaign attacking first the grand jury action and then the grand jury itself. Speculation that this is the key line of attack is supported by recent statements by the President's chief Watergate defense attorney, James St. Clair, and by attempts to obtain copies of the secret evidence upon which the grand jury action was based.

In a letter to Federal Judge
John Sirica Tuesday, Mr. St. Clair restated arguments that the grand fury had acted outside its authority in the first place and that even if the grand jury had acted properly, "the evidence was totally insufficient to support the action taken and, in fact, contradicts the action."

Sealed Evidence

He asked the judge to turn over the sealed evidence to both the Supreme Court and the White House because, "in the resolution of both these issues, it may be necessary for the Supreme of the grand jury's action." On its face, Mr. St. Clair's request was a perfectly straightforward attempt to attack the grand jury action on legal and constitutional grounds by asking the high court to decide, first, whether the grand jury could constitutionally name a president as an unindicted co-conspirator while he was still in office and, second, if the grand jury did in fact have that constitutional authority, whether the facts warranted the action. This legal attack would seem to be aimed directly at contentions by special Watergate pros-Leon Jaworski that the White House has no right to withhold tapes of 64 presidential conversations. tapes sought as evidence for Watergate trials. Illegal Aliens Said to Cost U.S. $115 Million

By Denny Walsh

WASHINGTON, June 14 (NYT), -The loss of tax revenue to federal and state governments on the income of allens who are in this country illegally is estimated at roughly $115 million annually by a congressional sub-committee in a report on its investigation of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The report, approved Tuesday by the subcommittee and now awaiting ratification by the perent House Government Operations Committee, cities a pilot tax collection program carried out last fall by the Internal Revenue Ser-

The 10-day program, conducted in Manhattan, Chicago and Los Angeles, indicated that at least 5 percent of illegal altens failed to file income tax returns, according to the Legal and Monetary Affairs subcommittee, head-ed by Rep. William Randall, D-

"Assuming that two-thirds of these aliens were employed for the full calendar year, the estimated loss of revenue would approach $100 million to the federal government and $15 million to the various states," the report said.

Similar Program

The revenue service has informed the subcommittee staff that the agency is in the midst of a similar program, expanded to 90 days, in New York, Chicago, Dallas and San Diego. The com-bined results of the two projects will determine whether the revenue service institutes a permanent program of interviewing appre-bended illegal aliens before they are expelled from the country to learn whether they have paid taxes on income carned during Avoiding a Gold Rush...

Secretary of the Treasury Simon has said that he plans to recommend that President Nixon terminate by the end of this year the ban on the ownership of gold bullion by U.S. citizens. He predicts that the President will probably do so. Thus a ban that was imposed 40 years ago, in a time of depression when the government was trying to discourage hoarding, may be removed in a period of breakneck inflation. Mr. Simou suggested that removal of the gold-ownership restriction might have an anti-inflationary effect.

However, to lift the gold ban in the present stage of severe monetary instability could be inflationary. For one thing, the United States is facing a deepening balanreof-payments defirit in 1974. Robert V. Roosa, former under serretary of the Treasury, warns that the deficit in the U.S. "basic" balance-whileb includes trade in goods and services, invisibles, foreign ald and longterm capital flows-will reach $15 billion or more, the worst in the nation's history. A rush by U.S. ritizens to duy gold buillon abroad could seriously deepen that deficit ann thereby drive down the value of the dollar. As experience shows, a depreciating currency tends to intensify domestic Inflation. While Mr. Simon has "ald he would sell off some of the Treasury gold stock to meet private demand, it is doubtful how far he is really prepared to go.

Unless careful plans are made for meeting what could be a huge increase in the demand for gold by private citizens, there could be another rapid run-up in the price of gold that could precipitate a flight from currencles, intensifying the world inflationary danger.

The need to provide enough gold supplies to meet rising private demand could be met in several ways in order to serve the aim of building a more stable world monetary system. One way, suggested by British Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, would be for the International Monetary Fund to sell part of its gold stock, now worth about $25 billion at free-market prices, and use the "profits" to help the less neveloped coun-

The IMF's managing director, H. Johannes Witteveen, wants the fund to arquire monetary gold from nations in exchange for Special Drawing Rights, and to make orderly gold sales to the free market. Still another approach would be for central banks to crrate a "buffer stock" of gold. to be managed by an agent-such as the IMF-that would buy or sell gold in the free market to insure orderly conditions.

Monetary reform would be made far more difficult by a fresh outburst of sperulation In gold, and it would be well to have an international plan for gold in place before enrouraging U.S. ritizens to enter the gold market en masse.

...Stop-Gap Solution

The agreement reached in Washington among the 10 major financial powers to let those nations suffering balance-of-payments deficits use their official gold stocks as collateral for loans would do nothing to mitlgate the inflationary effect of the Simon plan to permit U.S. citizens to buy gold bul-

International agreement on the use of gold as collateral is simply a stop-gap arrangement, necessitated by the heavy deficits of Italy, France and other gold-owning countries and by the immobilization of their gold reserves by the now absurdly low "officiai" gold price. The stop-gap plan will enable the United States to stick to its posttion that gold is being gradually phased out of the monetary system, while permitting foreign rentral banks to use their gold in International settlements at a price closer to that set in the free market.

Sooner or later, however, there will have to be a firm decision what role gold or alternative international reserves should play to keep the world monetary system stable and growing. The resolution of that crucial issue should not be pre-empted by a carelessly precipitated rush to gold that would worsen already grave worldwide inflation.

New Chance for Europe?

In spite of the leadership changes in Paris and Bonn, experience suggests caution as to the possibilities of a new start for Europe. The European rommunity is still exposed to many disintegrating forres, burdened with the economic crisis of many of its members and faced with British demands for "renegotiation." There is divergence of views as to the American relationship, an absence of political collaboration and no sign at all of achieving independence in defense.

Yet mutual economic interests and the current political pattern do indicate a possible European regeneration under Franco-German leadership. Glscard, too, spoke of "new European initiatives" during his elertion campaign. But in the final analysis Europe's future will depend not on Bonn or Paris but on whether the community in general can find the corporate will to bring its self-erosion to an end.

Kissinger's Explosion

Dr. Kissinger is justified in his explosion of wrath over the attempts which have been made in Washington to drag him into the Watergate scandals plot. The small-town atmosphere of Washington these days is quite amazing. . . . It makes one despair for the American media. The Washington Post, no doubt elated by its Watergate reporting triumphs, says that Dr. Kissinger's Salzburg statement was "silly and wrongheaded." The Seemingly Lost Art of Resigning

By James Reston

NEW YORK.—The art of resigning from political office -whether to slip or sneak away or go out with a hang-has declined rather seriously in this country in recent years. The people who should resign won't, and the people who shouldn't, threaten to do so.

When the old American politicians of another are differed on principle and policy or felt their personal honor" required them to resign, they usually went out and slammed the door. But the last really dramatic political exit was Richard Nixon's own Grand Farewell after losing the California governor's rare in 1962, and even then, alas, he didn't keep his word.

Heary Kissinger's recent resignation threat has done nothing to restore the art, and was not up to his usual style and wit. He was understandably irritated by charges that he had not been candid and may even have lied about his part in bugging his associates in the White House but his threat was all out of proportion to the offense.

Three Ways

There are only three effective ways to deal with useful but azgressive reporters like Clark Molenhof of the Des Moines Register Tribune. who asked Kissinger, with his customary gentility. whether the secretary had in fact initiated the wiretaps. The first way, which Mollenhof prefers, is to give him the keys to the First Amendment and the third is to revive and legalize ducling for cases of "personal But all three are a little

In this particular case. Kissinger somehow misplaced two of his most celebrated qualities-his sense of humor and his gift of logir. He performed like a great actor who threatens to oult the theater because he got a couple of burn reviews or was insulted going out the stage door.

"I do not believe it is possible." he said. "To conduct the foreign policy of the United States ... rhen the character and credibilmy of the secretary of state are at assue. And if it is not cleared up, I will resign."

This does restore an element of spunk and plain-speaking into our public affairs, but it is not very logical. For these charges example Kissinger have been rumbling in the committees of Congress and the back pages of the papers for years, and somehow, despite them. Rissinger has not only managed "to conduct the foreign policy of the United States," but has presided over one of the most brilliant chapters in the long history of American diplomacy, and has improved almost everything except the Irish

Also, if Kissinger thinks he should resign unless his "credibil-ity and character" are restored at once by the Congress, what does he think President Nixon should do facing much more serious and prolonged charges of his credibility, character, and violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution?

somehow Kissinger has changed Washington's relations with the Middle East, China and the Soviet Union by the force of his intelligence, personality and character -particularly in his personal relations with Chou En-lai, Sadat, Faisal, and the leaders of Israel.

He did not do this by himself. Time, geography, and power were the essential ingredients, but Kissinger seized the moment, and it is ridiculous in his own terms and on his own record and objectives. to talk of resignation,

"I have believed," he said, "that I should do what I could to heat the divisions in this country," but he is not likely to do this by resigning at the wrong time and on the wrong issue. So maybe he'd better stick ground.

Ecology II—No Secret Wars

By C. L. Sulzberger

NEW YORK-The Caracas conference for the creation of a new maritime legal code cannot avoid the ecological aspects of the seven seas and who controls them. This fact should remind us that while nations focus attention on sharing oceanic wealth and limiting its surface and subsurface military use, it is urgent to safeguard the world against peacetime dangers from scientific ad-

Employment of environmental 163 TUPES to serve as actual weapons of war creates for the first time in history almost as murh danger as do more conventional armaments or thermonuclear devices. Also, even in the absence of conflict, there is danger that testing of these conceivable methods of employing the elements for possible martial purposes might produce catas-

It is therefore helpful to remind the world-apropos of the Caracas meeting-that now would he an excellent time to push the resolution accepted by the U.S. Secate (July 11, 1973). This called for a "treaty prohibiting the use of any environmental or geophysical modification activity as a weapon of war or the carrying out of any research or experimentation directed thereto."

Since the sea represents about 70 percent of the world's surface, the Caracas meeting cannot belp but deal with many of the problems at least indirectly touched upon by the Senate draft, for which Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.L. was largely responsible.

More and more countries are coming to realize that technology has reached a stage where phenomena previously regarded as miraculous may today be deliberately planned by scientists. It is now possible to alter the climate over large regions, and to raise water level in oceans cloud-seeding or by employment of massive nuclear explosions which melt the icecaps in the Arctic and Antarctic areas.

Climatic modification was accomplished on a very limited scale in Indochina to restrict North Vietnamese use of the Ho Chi Minh trail by muddying it with artificial rainstorms. Such procedures could of course be beneficial in drought areas like Sabaran Africa, if judiciously ap-

Changing water levels, even when carefully supervised, might produce menacing tidal waves and, if the rise in levels was too precipitous, could drown such famous coastal cities as New York, Leningrad, Hamburg or Obviously manmade disasters would have no conceivable value to a nation at war unless it was landlocked, mountainous, fertile or interested in suicide. But experiments seeking to devise controlled modification of the elements in designated areas may easily get out of band.

Thus it is already possible to trigger artificial earthquakes by judicious injectious of fluid, or underground atomic blasts. It is also conceivable that uitraviolet intensity over specific regions could adversely affect biological

Secret Wars

Any of these experiments or a combination of them might be developed as a means of making wholesale war. Indeed, one power could today attack another without even having the fact of a secret war's existence known.

Such a camouflaged conflict could persist for years, since mankind has long been accustomed to natural disasters. Storms, floods, droughts and earthquakes can now be induced in an exaggerated rhythm, Humanity has been sufficiently; educated so that, if not inhibited, it may seek to intrude on domains hitherto regarded as divine.

An unofficial meeting of American and Soviet leaders discussed these implications in December, 1972, at the seventh bilateral Dartmouth Conference" Tha U.S. delegation included William Ruckelshaus, then administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, The Soviet delegation was led by E. K. Fedorov, chief of the main directorate of the U.S.S.R. hydrometeorological service, and Yuri Zhukov, prominent journalist and Supreme Soviet deputy.

The delegations agreed on rejection of chemical, biological or nuclear means of mass destruction and added in a communique: "They also reject attempts to make use of man-made environmental change as a meats of waging war, and urge that an international agreement be sought renouncing the development and use of such weapons."

Both superpowers endorse tha idea of such a treaty. It is therefore time to formalize their ideas by an accord other nations could sign. The Caracas conference might well push through this ides, which so chviously impinges on maritime affairs.

At least if the world cannot yet effectively outlaw war as a known disaster, it might ban it as a secret catastrophe, When Nixon and Brethney meet this month. this is one thing they should scree on in their mutual in-

Deceptions

Sympathy for the plight of the displaced Palestimans presently living in refugee camps is univermi. It can be the only humane resction of any rational person, regardless of nationality. Attempts to translate this feel-mg into concrete efforts or practical solutions, however, remain forever stillborn, due to the confusion surrounding the hallmark perase-the legitimate rights of he Palestinian people." What exactly are these legitimate rights. Do they merely involve, as some suggest, settlement in a decent environment? Do they involve the necessary destruction of the State of Israel as others would lead us to believe?

Curiously enough, the most blatant perpetrators of this confusion are the very men who have emerged as the de facto spokes-men of the Palestinian cause—the terrorist leaders. Wide differences of opinion are apparent in these men and even in the speeches of a single man over a period of

A certain amount of this contradiction of views is under-standable, given the differing ideologies of various leaders and the political uncertainties of the day. However, there exists a much more perfidious source of confusion, which arises when one spokesman makes grossly contradictory statements simultanecusiv to different audiences. This erate and pervasive. Permit ma to cite a recent example:

The May 22 edition of the International Herald Tribune quotes from an interview held on May 20 ulth Mr. Hayef Hawatmeh, the leader of the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, recently immortalized by the Maalot massacre. In the interrlew. Mr. Hawalmeh outlines what he considers to be the "national rights" of the Palestinian people, in effect, he calls for the establishment of an independent Palestinian state within the borders of the 1947 UN Partition Plan. To his audience of Western journalists, no mention is made of the need for any further liberation beyond this. Le Monde of the same day also quotes Mr. Hawatmeh in a speech also made on May 20; this time to a highly partisan audience of Palestinions. Here, he states that, onre such territories are liberated he and all the other leaders.

agree that no demilitarization should occur "eo that the people will be able to pursue the armed struggle until the complete recovery of the usurped father-land." (My translation.)

The difference in meaning of these two contrasting speeches made on the same day is tremendous. Is it any wonder that, given this practice, the world cannot proceed beyond the state of passive sympathy? Is it any wonder that Israel views any alleged "firm" commitment to a just and lasting solution with auspicion? How can anyone deal in good faith with a man who speaks out of both sides of his mouth?

The Palestinian leadership must realize that such intentional contradictions can only induce confusion and cloud the most relevant issues. Until an honest, stable position is presented frank discussion of potential and practical solutions will be impossible. SETH P. WAXMAN. Lirauru, Kenya.

Scientific Armada to Explore Mysteries of Global Weather

WASHINGTON, June 14 (AP), -A scientific task force of 38 sings from 10 nations is heading toward designated rendezvous areas in the tropical Atlantic for a new attack on the mysteries of global weather.

It is the spearhead of a still larger array-including 13 aircraft, six kinds of space satellites, 65 oceanic buoys and the weather-probing gear of nearly 1,000 land-based weather stations -that will take part in the threemonth venture, which opens officially tomorrow. The project will cost $53 million.

More than 4.000 scientists and other personnel from 72 pations, led by the United States and the Soviet Union, are being deployed over a 20-million-square-mile sea-and-land area in the equatorial belt.

The project has been described by American government weathermen "as perhaps the largest and scientific experiment ever undertaken."

Its sims are to: · Help find means of forecasting the world's weather a week or more in advance, compared with only a few days, at best,

· Seek better means of forecasting hurricanes and typhoous, Explore theoretical possibilnies for large-scale modification of the weather. Provide new information on the causes of great climatic changes.

· Help determine whether, and to what extent, man's pollution of the etmosphere affects global climate.

The project is being staged in the tropics because the zone receives half the solar energy that strikes the planet and therefore, acts as "the boiler of the giant heat engine which drives the atmosphere's global circulation." according to scientists of the government's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, But they also say that, while

Bonn Asks Steps To Cut Flow of Migrant Labor

GENEVA, June 14 (Reuters'. West German Labor Minister Walter Arendt said Festerday that his country's ability to absorb foreign labor was increasingly limited and urged developing countries to create more jobs to halt the flow of migrant workers. He told the annual conference of the 125-nation International Labor Organization that large numbers of workers continued to emigrate from poorer countries to large towns in developed countries.

Although migrant workers in West Germany bave the same rights as Germans, he said "our social and business infrastructure does not allow unlimited access for foreign workers, and it would be presponsible if we were to accept them on an unrestricted basis without thought for suflicient accommodation, schools. hospitals and other arrangements."

He said it was natural for labor to move toward capital but stressed the need for capital to be brought to labor in large amounts. Turks. Yugoslavs, Greeks and Spaniards make up a large portion of West Germany's migrant force.

Radio in China Reports

Mao Bars Naming of New Chief of State

By Robert S. Elegant

HONG KONG, June 14 3. official Chanese radio broadcast has reported that Chairman Man-The-time has ordered that no ner cirief of state be named.

A transcript of the bresoure made by the radio station of Ewanguing Province has just bycome available here. The broadcast quoted an article by a supplunit of the 'Canton imilitary region! Proops." which attacked Mr. Mao's former heur-designate the inte Field Marshal Lin Place

According to that article '4' Mao rejected Marshal Line proposals, presumably in the lair 1960s and early 1970s that a new chief of state be selected to replace Liu Shao-chi, the forme: president of the People's Reprinlic. Mr. Liu became the chalvillain of the Cultural Ecvolutor and was deposed by the Con:munist party in 1966.

The article further deciared that Mr. Mao was still opposed to the appointment or election of a chief of state. At present, 68vest-old party elder Tung Pi-wit is acting as chief of state but appears in public only occa-

Atmosphere Clouded

Pailure to fill the post of eniel of state has contributed to present unrest m Chioa. As a result of general uncertainty regarding the succession to the alling, 81-yearold Mr. Mao, the political atmosphere is clouded by factional quarrels and sauggles for power.

The chairman's occision has made the position of moderate Premier Chou En-lai terv difficult. At the 10th Party Congrees lest August, Mr. Chou promused that a session of the Na-tional People's Coogress, the first meeting of China's formally sorereign legislature store 1964. would be held "soon." But tile congress, which is legally responsible for selecting the chief of state could hardly meet without designating a new chief of star-With Mr. Mae opposed to that measure, the coogress cannot convene.

Mr. Mao's decision is consistent with his previous actions. For his own reasone, political as well as personal, it is clear that the chairman wants to avoid creating a political figure who could men partially, rival his own position. Both Threats Purged

The two past heirs-apparent to Mr. Mao. Mr. Liu and Marsha! Lin, were purged. Both are now denounced for having plotted to seize supreme power. Marshal Lin was said to have been killed in a piane crash co

The Kwangtung broadcast sain Marshal Lin had urged that either Mr. Mao or himself assume the office of chief of state to stabilize the political situation and calm the apprehensions of the people. But, the official broadcast said, Mr. Mao rejected the argument, largely because "Lin Piao was plotting to use the office [in either Mr. Mao's houds or his own! in order to seize supreme power un!awiully." The chairman tlatly holds that selecting a chief of state would be had for Chips. He believes the broadcast said, that "the prole-

> presence on the island. U.S. mtelligence specialists said that, as a possible inducement, the Russians have delivered a patroi eraft for the 120-man Mauritius Navy, with a second boat due later in the year.

Other Anchorages

Russia has fleet anchorages, access to port and airfield facilitics, and a naval communications station in Somalia, Aden and on the island of Socotra in the approaches to the Red Sea.

A pase on Mauritus, about 2,000 miles to the south, would permit Soviet raval units to operate for extended periods close to important oil tanker soutes to Western Europe and the United States.

Intelligence sources said that the Russians also sought repeatedly to persuade India to grant the Soviet Navy base rights, but that they have been turned down. India does not want expansion of Russian or U.S. naval operations in the Indian Ocean.

For this reason, India strongly objects to U.S. Navy plans to rillid a fleet base on the island or Diego Garcia, about 1,000 miles south of India. So tar, India has net said anything publicly about Soviet moves on Mauritius.

Delay on Construction

Coogressional opponents have forced a delay in construction of the base, Peotagon officials have described it as an outpost where U.S. naval vessels may perform limited upkeep and receive perlodic repairs and supplies instead of having to sail several thousand mules to the main Seventh Pieet base at Subic Bay in the Philippines.

The congressional opponents that they fear that creation of a U.S. base on Diego Garcia vill cause Russia to react, leading to a naval arms race in the Indian Ocean. Backers of the Diego Garcia pian argue that the Russian fleet negan cruising in the In-Ocean years before the U.S. Navy and that Russia intends to increase its presence there regardless of what the United States oves about the proposed base. The United States withdrew a

LONDON THEATER-

Stoppard's 'Travesties'-Seriously Frivolous

By John Walker

LONDON (IHT).—Tom Stoppard's "Travesties," receiving its world premiere at the Aldwych Theatre, is a bright and mostly beautiful firework display of wit. intellect and stagecraft: whizzing catherine wheels of thought, spinning off sparks of argument, sudden jumping crack-ers of humor that explode pretentiousness, oretty colored lights of sheer delight-and the occasional dud rocket that remains earth-

It also emphasizes the extra-ordinarily literary nature of Mr. Stoppard's inspiration, even more than in his reworking of "Ham-let" in "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" or in his brilliant excursion into academic philoso-phy in "Jumpera." "Travesties" is dense with puns and quotations, chunks of James Joyce, blts of Shakespeare, with the whole an elegant variation on the manncr, and some of the matter, of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest," although Mr. Stoppard is a writer who emphasizes the value of remaining seriously frivolous.

His artifice seems perfectly natural, particularly in a play that debates, among other things, the relationship between art and life, between radical art and revolutionary politics, between artistic truth and reality, between events as they were and as they are remembered and imaginatively reconstructed.

Three Revolutionaries

The play is based on the presence in Zurich of 1917 of three revolutionary figures, Lenin, James Joyce and the dadaist Tristan Tzara-and is built around one strange fact, that Joyce was briefly business manager for a production of Wilde's masterplece and was subsequently sued by the play's Algy, a minor British consular official named Henry Carr, over the cost of a pair of trousers he bought for the part.

Nothing more is known of Carr. But Mr. Stoppard selzes on this one fact and makes Carr the central figure of his play, an old man, still stuck in Switzerland, reminiscing about the past, dis-torting and exaggerating his own part in those hectic events, elevating himself to the role of British consul and an intlmate of Joyce, Lenin and Tzara. It is one of Mr. Stoppard's little jokes that Carr equips himself with a manservant named Bennett which, as his wife sharply reminds him at the end of the play, was the name of the consul.

tween a battered, shuffling chain-smoking ancient of today and the elegant, dapper young gentleman of his memories, is superbly played by John Wood with a crackling intensity. As he has proved in a succession of roles with the Royal Shakespeare Company in the last few years, Mr. Wood is one of England's finest actors and here he holds the play together at the moments when its fracile elements look like breaking apart. For not only does Mr. Stoppard use much of Wilde's plot, with Tears (John Hurt) as Jack to Carr's Aley, but he has limericks in the manner of Joyce, includes moments of musical comedy and a long documentary section on Lenin's attitude to art.

Purpose of Art

The play's central debate on the purpose of art is dazzling without coming to any definite conclusions—although Tzara is shown cutting up a Shake-spearean sonnet and drawing the bits out of a hat to create an inferior work while Joyce performs real magic with the same hat, triumphantly producing a white rabbit. Mr. Stoppard does show that life imitates dada sometimes-one of Lenin's plans

The role of Carr, varying be- to leave Switzerland to return to Russia involved the use of two Swedish deaf-mutes, and the man's taste in art remained resolutely old-fashioned and bour-

> Carr himself, although hostile to art-"The idea of the artist as a special human being is art's greatest achievement and it's a fake." he says—spends his time re-creating his own past in order to emphasize his individuality, an activity of the same kind, if not the same order, as the others. John Hurt as Tzara, Frank Windsor as Lenin, Maria Aitken as Gwendolen, Beth Morris as Cecily and John Bott as a manservant give excellent performances. Peter Wood's direction is sprightly and imaginative, although the strictly documentary moments are not assimilated into the texture of the play. It is, though, another triumph for the Royal Shakespeare Company and the third new play of their season—the others being David Mer-cer's "Duck Song" and Peter Barnes's extravagant "Bewitched" -to show some of the best contemporary writers stretching their considerable talents.

Sam Shepard's "Tooth of Crime" at the Royal Court is a rock version of the mythic theme of the sacrificial victim, the purging of the past by the death of one king and his replacement by a new leader, an old and potent ritual that can as easily assimilate the assassination of a president as, here, the toppling of one pop star by another. Mr. Shepard emphasizes the gangster element in rock, the violence and death just below the surface of the music, and has fashioned a mar-velously vivid language out of the slang of the two worlds. Jim Sharman's dim and moody direction puts across the play with great force and there are good performances from Mike Pratt as Hoss, the dying leader, Richard O'Brien as Crow, his replacement, and, especially from Diane Lang-ton, Hoss's girl, who makes the most of some plaintive songs.

But the play palls before the end. The battle between the two men is one of style and these are hardly differentiated. And the long doel between them that takes up much of the play's second half is mostly remarkable for its poverty of means. It has only to be compared to a similar duel, between two monks in Barnes's "The Bewitched," to reveal the serious limitations of rock, its inability to express much more than anger and chaos.

The Timeless World of 'Venice and Byzantium'

An exhibition which recently mened in Venice ("Venice and vantium" at the Doges' Palace d at the Marcian Library posite, to Sept. 30; attests to e affinities and rivalvies of these 70 focuses of civilization. About o items are on display, about ilf of them on loan from various diseums and churches within enice itself, the remainder comg from 34 cities and localities, ostly Italian, but also including podon and Berlin (In the gamizers' view, visitors should so take in St. Mark's and the thedral on the island of Tor-Millo, which contains some of the ost magnificent Byzantine moles in existence. Byzantium, whose imperial istence spans just over 1,000 irars, is an trritating and tragic gure among the torch-bearers of --- vilization. It generated a mystic - prid of oppressive density and imobility and led a political life terrible violence, both underanded and manifest.

In 653, for instance, the Pope as kidnapped from Rome, taken Constantinople, judged, striped of his power, thrown into In with thieves and murderers and finally sent off to die in tile. Justinian II. for his part, as deposed by a military coup 5 691, and disposed of, in what hen was deemed the proper podrome where his nose was cut off. He later returned from exila and devoted his second reign to the insure pursuit of vengeance. A porphyry bust displayed at the Doges Palace depicts him with his mutilated nose. Such examples of cruelty abound, including that of Irene who had her own son's eyes put out in order to take his place on the throne

At the same time Byzantium was the threshing floor on which a good deal of Christian doema was elaborated, a process punctusted by violent urban riots and outbursts of passion from which the heads of state were obviously not immune. The emperor Theophilus, for instance, was so in-censed when he lost a theological argument with two monks that he gave the order that some insulting verses be branded onto their foreheads. And the order was promptly executed.

I conoclasis

One enduring subject of debate was that concerning the religious images. The iconoclasts believed that they should be hanned and from time to time, when they held the imperial power, the images were destroyed. They were not coposed to paintings and mosaics that had a didactic purpose, but to icons, strictly speaking that is to say the representations of Christ, the Virgin and the saints. These were often considered to have miraculous powers and some were even described as "acheiropoietes," meaning that they had not been made by any human hand. These were the center of an extraordinarily fervent cult.

Certainly the icon-Byzantine or not-has a certain form of almost hypnotic density that is not found in any other style of Christian imagery and one is reminded of the story about Bernadette Soubirous quoted by André Malraux in his latest book. Bernadette, after her visions at Lourdes, entered the orders and her superiors were curious to know what the Virgin who had appeared to her looked like. Her bishop brought her great albums of the principal representations of the Virgin in Western art. None of them pleased her. Then, suddenly she was shown an icon. the "Vierge de Cambrai," and she fell on her knees: "That's her, Monseigneur!"

What is the power, the potency of the Byzantine image-why is it that next to the only surviving 13th-century lunette on St.

It is perhaps worth remarking that Byzantine art is not some sort of degenerate heir of Greek and Roman realism that the less gifted eraftsmen of the Christian centuries could no longer equal. Razor's Edge

But "hat about Venice in all that? The position of Venice in us relationship to Braintinia was always, more or less, on a rator's edge. The Venetians acknowledged the suzerainty of outant Byzantium when their dangerous neighbors were breathuic down their necks. Nearby Raycona was a thriring seat of Byranime power and art in Venice grea from the same ground In time local partienlargues of style seem to have merged. The later pennings seem to give a lovelaste of a maracteristically Italian style. In time too, Venice deluted a philosophy of its awa. The Venetians were oot holding the globe on their shoulders but scribing its seas and litting by their trade and their rats. Byzantium, not Venice, was the "bulwari: of Christendon," But Veolee, for a long time, was a

West—a focus and a filler loo. Finally, I believe that the best expression of the Byzantine outlook is not so much in the object, but in the total setting As you so in St. Mark's, the building all akilter and bonded together with from bars, whole areas ravaged in the 17th century with mept transpositions of what - might - possibly - hare made - an - adequate - oil -painting into mosaics, you become gradually conscious of the intimacy of that immense building. This, one senses, was the proper setting for ritual which is the endless repetition of a pirotal event. This was the place to whisper and to amp over and over again, age after age, to conjure and in implore, to conless and to arclaim, to hope and to tear, and to feel comforted by the braoding golden eternity. But the ritual, like the civilization that brought it forth, shaped it and adorped it, lost its energy. That energy has long since forsaken the expectant secuting of eternity and turned to time, and the emploration of time and a different dream.

IMF Details Its 'Guidelines' For Managing Floating Rates

DJ).—The International Mone-tery Fund (IMF) guidelines for the management of floating exchange rates, agreed upon yester-day and effective immediately, include the following points:

· A member country with a floating exchange rate should intervene on the foreign exchange market as necessary to prevent or moderate sharp and disruptive fluctuations from day to day and from week to week in the exchange value of its currency.

· A member with a floating rate should not normally act aggressively with respect to the decress that value when it is falling or to enhance it when it

• If a member with a floating rate should desire to act otherwise to bring its exchange rate within, or closer to, some target zone of rates, it should consult with the fund about this target and its adaptation to changing

Banker Reports Decline In Swiss Financial Role

ZURICH, June 14 (Reuters).-The growth of Euromorket business is bypassing Switzerland as international banks in the Euromarket are expanding their activities in other financial centers such as London and Luxembourg, Eric Gasser, president of the Association of Poreign Banks in Switzerland, said

He told a press conference this situation arose principally because of the high equity capital demands made on banks internationally active under Swiss banking law.

Quoting estimates of the Bank for International Section ments, Mr. Gasser said that whereas the foreign activity of banks in London, Paris and Luxembourg rose last year hetween 40 and 60 percent banks in Switzerland stagnated in this respect in 1978.

It is certain, Mr. Gasser said, that Switzerland has lost a lot of its relative weight as a financial center.

Discussing the future, Mr. Gasser said it is highly countries whether Swiss restrictions in the international credit business would disappear in the foreseeable future. A considerable expansion of this husiness from Switzerland is therefore unthink-

Activity must therefore be channelled into other paths. Mr. Gasser said, adding that in his opinion the best directions for foreign banks in Switzerland are asset administration and investment banking and the placement business.

However, in answer to a question, Mr. Gasser soid no signs are emerging that foreign banks in Switzerland are considering closing their doors and pulling out of the country, Meanwhile, the association's annual report showed that at the end of 1973 the number of foreign hanks in Switzerland totalled 99 against 97 a year previously.

Player Has First-Round Lead in U.S. Open Golf

Africa took the first-round lead yesterday in the U.S. Open Golf defending champion Johnny Miller said it made him "feel like a dog." the world's finest golfers hacked their way through one of the highest-scoring open rounds in recent history. Scores like Jack Nicklaus's 75 and Miller's 76 were the rule rather than the exception, and even Player said there would be a lot of frustration before this tournament is over.

"You can't walk around and worry about disappointments," said Player, who had the day's nnly suh-par round going until he bogeyed the final hole. "This is going to be a week of disappointments." Player's 70 marked the first

The London Bobby—A Vanishing Breed?

By Tom Lambert

LONDON—The Metropolitan Police Force, headquartered at New Scotland Yard, is losing men at such a rate that it soon may not have eoough bobbies to go around.

Loog a problem, the manpower shortage is becoming acute. At the beginning of 1974, there were 20,935 policemen and policewomeo on duty in London-5,120 under the authorized streogth of 26.055, a level that has not been attained for more

There are some 800 fewer men on the force now than ball century ago. But the reported crime rate now is 20 times higher than it was then.

The Causes

The manpower shortage has a variety of causes. Fewer recruits come forward. Officers transfer to other English police forces. Young bobbies find their London pay inadequate-if married they have trouble obtaining mortgages to buy homes. Their hours are long taround 46 hours a weekt. Last year, the police force had a net loss of 503 men and

In a news conterence the other day on the Metropolitan Force's activities last year, commissioner Sir Robert Mark said, We cannot go oo lorever losing men at this rate without being required to consider oew and experimental methods of "The best system may have to go in some areas where there is a dire shortage lot pobcemen)," he said, in favor of "team or 'fire hrigade' policing-drafting meo into ao area when required for emergeocles."

Even by English standards, London's policemeo are underpaid. A oew, unmarried constable gets $66 a week, and can get about $13 in a rental allowance for a total of less than $35. The average industrial wage in Britain is about $36.

Backed by Sir Robert, the Police Federation has been campaigning for an additional $25 weekly cost-of living allowance for Loodon policemen. But so far nothing has come of that campaign-and meanwhile the size of the Metropolitan Police Force continoes shrinking.

Despite manpower and other "difficulties of every conceivable kind," Sir Robert sald his policemen achieved commendahle law enforcement results last year.

Crime Rate

Crimes of violence increased by 13 percent, he reported, but the incidence of hurgiaries, rohberies and muggings dropped. The oumber of bank holdups decreased to two monthly last year, as compared with six a month in 1972. Shoplifting increased, Sir Robert noted, and pickpockets were busier than in the preceding year.

Public complaints about policemeo increased by several hundred to 5,869. he went on. They are investigated by a special police detachment and, in many instances, referred to the director of public prosecutions, Sir Robert said seven policemen were charged with criminal offenses last year, and five were found guilty. He also noted that 90 policemen were fired from or left the metropolitan force "to forestall disciplinary proceedings." In a remarkable understatement, Sir Robert said that

"bomb attacks of all kinds added a new dimension to the problem of dissent" here last year. He has a special bomb squad to handle explosive, incendiary and other devices, and to try to track down those who use them for political or other

The commissioner was philosophically pessimistic about Londoo's increasing traffic problems, but noted one move is being made to try to ease one of them.

Since Britain joined the Commoo Market, truck traffic from Europe has greatly increased. Non-English-speaking drivers, trying to make pickups or deliveries in their behemoth trucks, along what is for them the wrong side of the street, have contributed to traffic snarls.

The bobbles are to be issued phrase books in six Europeao languages so they can help the drivers along their way. & Los Angeles Times.
